This issue of TORTURE contains an index for the period 1991-1995. As of 1995 TORTURE no. 4 will contain a cumulated index for the year in question.

The index for 1991-1995, in other words the period from the start of the journal TORTURE and five years on, contains all articles in alphabetical order. The subsequent numbers refer to the volume and page number.

In addition to the listings by the title of the article and by the first author, we are publishing an index of the original articles, the Centre Presentations and the Supplements.

The Rehabilitation and Research Centre for Torture Victims is an independent, humanitarian, non-political organization established in 1982 to help victims of torture and to contribute to the prevention of torture. Its main objectives are to rehabilitate persons who have been subjected to torture, to rehabilitate their families, to instruct Danish health professionals in the examination and treatment of persons who have been subjected to torture, and to carry on research into the nature, the extent and the consequences of torture.

The International Rehabilitation Council for Torture Victims is a private non-profit foundation, created in 1986 by the RCT. The objectives of the foundation are, on an international basis, to support research into all aspects of torture, to support education and training of health professionals and of other relevant personnel in the medical, social, legal and ethical aspects of torture, and to serve as an international clearing house for information about torture activities.
